THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1867.

In another column we publish the ddress of the "Atlanta Association for the Reinterment of the Kentucky Confederate Dead in Georgia." The President of this Association, Dr. John M. Johnson, is now in our city, the guest of the Louis ville Hotel, where he will receive subscrip tions to the fund of the Association. We do not doubt that subscriptions will pour in upon him during his stay amongst us r people in general and our women in particular will see to it that the cause he has in charge shall not suffer by the negct of Louisville.

This, we believe, is Dr. Johnson's first visit to our city since the close of the war. We are happy to see that he is in as high ealth and as genial spirits as when he ft us six years ago. Though no doubt a iser, he is certainly not a sadder man. We are sure that our citizens will cordial-

We invite the attention of our eaders to the extracts from the Washngton correspondence of the London Times which we publish in the Journal of this morning. The correspondent of the Times is a gentleman of the name of Jennings, who is reputed just as well enlightened, and certainly there is in these extracts nothing which can derogate from his reputation. The account of his interview with President Johnson vindicates itself. It is manifestly faithful.

As to what the President said, nothing on the question of the hour could be said better or more aptly. It exactly suits the present occasion, and, notwithstanding the rumors that have since been flying about, we cannot doubt that it exactly sets orth the present views of the President. It is surely a clear, able, and decisive presentation of the question. It is not only sound but convincing. We commend it to the attention of our readers.

A section of the army-appropriaon bill, now under consideration in the House of Representatives, provides that | This is what it is. It is all this. 'the General-in-Chief shall have his headquarters at Washington, and not be assigned to duty elsewhere without the approval of the Senate, orders given to he contrary to be considered a misdemeanor in the office, and the army officer who shall transmit or obey such orders shall be liable to imprisonment for not ess than two or more than thirty years. This provision goes a step further than the martial-law bill, which makes it the duty of the general of the army to assign officers to the command of the various military districts constituted by the bill without, however, expressly forbidding the interposition of the Commander-in-Chief; but this provision, under a penalty which cuts right and left, expressly forbids the Commander-in-Chief, without the previous consent of the Senate, to exercise his or dinary authority. The provision makes it a misdemeanor for the President to exercise his authority as Commander-in Chief, and a crime for his subordinates to obey or even transmit his orders. It revolutionizes the army as well as the

The object of this provision, like that of the kindred provision in the martial-law bill, is twofold; namely, first, to prevent the President from using his constitutional authority against the revolutionary measures of Congress, and, secondly to pave the way to his impeachment if he oes so use his constitutional authority. For the way to his impeachment is not yet. paved. Not a single misdemeanor has een laid down on that slippery way. The majority in Congress find it so difficult indeed to make out a case of misdemeanor against the President, that, in sheer desperation, they have resolved to declare, as they do declare in this provision, that it is a misdemeanor in him to obey the Constiution! Under this declaration, they can easily make out their case. He is guilty of that high crime and misdemeanor every bour in the day. And that unquestion ably is his real offence in the estimation of his persecutors. The Editor of the New York Tribune ravely puts this question: "Did not the Convention often decline to embody in the text of the Constitution powers which they nevertheless expected would be exercised? We express no opinion, but simply inquire." The people answered this question in advance by embodying in the text of the Constitution the following article: "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people." This article removes the point beyond the reach of cavil, though without the article the reservation. The article merely asserts explicitly what the Constitution before asserted implicitly. "This amendment," says Story in his Commentaries on the Constitution, "is a mere affirmation of what, upon any just reasoning, is a necessary rule of interpreting the Constitution. Being an instrument of limited and that what is not conferred is withheld, and belongs to the State authorities, if invested by their Constitutions of government respectively in them; and if not so invested, it is retained by the PEOPLE, as a part of their residuary sovereignty."

Harper & Brothers have just pubshed in a very tasteful volume the principal speeches and addresses of the late Henry Winter Davis. The collection forms a just and full memorial of the public services of Mr. Davis, which, however we may rate them, are held in high estination by the Republicans of the country. We should add that Senator Cresswell's oration on the life and character of Mr. Davis is included in the volume. The oration is an impassioned and eloquent production. It is no disparagement to President Johnson that the two Houses of Congress pass bills over his veto. He is

The National Intelligencer thus noes the passage of the martial-law bill by the House: "The blackest record ever made by an assembly of representatives of a free people stained yesterday the proceedings of the House of Representatives. Never, in the most tyrannous hour of the Long Parliament misrule; never, amid the utmost subservience to the royal mandate of an English king; never, in the most blood-thirsty epoch of a French convention, did the representatives of the people stamp themselves with greater ignominy. The bill, which passed by a vote of 109 to 55, hands one-third of the people of this country over to military government. For the rule of law, it substitutes the will of an officer. For the tribunal of a Judge, it furnishes a drum-head courtmartial or a military commission. For the process of a court and the peacefu visit of a Sheriff, it proffers the order of a petty satrap and the presence of a squad of bayonets. It ignores the Chief Magistrate of the United States. It invests a General with absolute power over onethird of his countrymen. It erects subordinate dictators, armed with unbridled power, from the Potomac to the Rio Grande. Throughout this broad domain, comprising the fairest and most fertile section of the Republic, no man is to have a secure title to his property; no man's house is free from search: no man's chattles exempt from seizure; no man's liberty unexposed to assault; no man's life

dier, exalted above the law, may ruthlessly invade a citizen's home and drag him rom the bosom of his family. Such a bill makes a mockery of free institutions. It despites all the great safeguards of popular liberty. It tramples on the freedom of the press. It annihilates the right of free assemblage. It silences the lips of free speech. It infringes the right of the people to bear arms. It wipes out the guaranty of a grand jury presentment. It abolishes the exemption of freedom from seizure and from search. It abrogates the right of trial by a jury of one's peers in the vicinage of the commission of the alleged offence. It tramples upon the prerogative of the President, it makes war upon the Constitution, it rebels against the authority of the Supreme Court. It invades the sacred constitutional rights of the citizen. It is treason enveloped in the forms of law. It is re bellion wearing the garb of legitimate power. It is usurpation assuming the

Conversation With President Conflict Between Himselfand Congress.

From the London Times' Own Cor. Washington, Thursday, Jan. 10, 1867. It is some months since I last saw the resident, and I was anxious to ascertai Ir. Johnson was good enough to give me n interview this afternoon at the White House, and he expressed to me the views which I shall, with his sanction, endeavor to repeat to you.

The President said that the light in which he regarded public affairs at the present moment was that a minority in the country was seeking to impose its views upon the majority. That minority have the scale would be turned against knew the scale would be turned against them if the full number of the States were represented in Congress, and hence they were inflexible in their determination t keep them out. If once the people could be brought to understand that the funda-mental principles of the Government were at stake, and not mere questions of party supremacy, there would be hope that jus-tice would be done. In the elections last Autumn false issues were dexterously in-roduced, and upon them the people pro-nounced a judgment. They were told hat if the Southern States were readmitted the national interest would be imperiled, and they did not stop to consider whether this was true or not. They forgot the weakness to which the South had been reduced, and never considered that t would be still unavoidable that it should bey the North, the stronger power—the

But, continued the President, it is imhave been brought back into a proper action with the general machinery of Government. The Government and the States ment, the response to this movem istence. The States had brought Congress into existence, and now Congress pro-posed to destroy the States. It proposed abolish the original and elementary of life altogether? Suppose they said, "We are within the scope of the Constitution; we are obeying the laws; the Government recognizes us by the infliction of taxes and the appointment of public officers; and no Congress can decree our dissolution!" Could the Government deny or repudiate this argument? If it came before the courts and they substantiated it, what would remain to Congress but the exercise of force in order 'to carry out its views? Thus the country would be involved in anther revolution; toward that all the proceedings of Congress in relation to the South were tending. The Executive Government were at least endeavoring to ful-fill what was the supreme law of the land— the Constitution. There was a time when men considered the Constitution first when they framed laws. Now they occasionally mentioned it in an accidental manner. Some one, on looking around, discovered

Some one, on looking around, discovered the Constitution, with much the same sense of astonishment, apparently, that a man who was watching the stars might experience when he discovered a new planet. But the Constitution was on the side of the Executive; law was on its side, and reason and justice. The people this Republican Government, although attention might be diverted from it "There is," added the President. "no answer to this argument—no attempt is made to answer it, except by the use of arbitrary power. You feel sometimes as if you were following up a principle straight to its source, and had got a tight grip upon it; and it is exactly so in this

The Constitution: the President further said, had been solemnly received when the people went into the Federation. No section of the people, or 'heir represent-atives, could ignore or overthrow it ex-cept arbitrarily. By-and-by, when the people heard the crash of the fabric which they had formerly prized so highly, when the sound of the falling timbers reached their ears, and they saw the dust and confusion, they would stop and look up to ascertain who it was that had been doing the work of destruction. That por-tion of the people which was now unheard would eventually demand by what right a Congress representing a part only of the States had assumed this responsibility. Formerly, when a measure was inrotmerly, when a measure was introduced, the first question asked was, "Is it constitutional?" and the next, "Is it expedient?" Now, Congress only asked, "Is it expedient?" but, in the judgment of the Executive, what was unconstitutional could not be expedient. The Constitution did, indeed, provide for its own cultargement or amendment and it own enlargement or amendment, and it was competent for the people to change it according to the method prescribed. But now the majority of the people were voice-less on the question; they had no opportu-nity to make themselves heard. One duty of the Executive was undoubtedly to pro tect the rights of the minority, and h Congress was aiming to pull down the Executive, and was even threatening the Supreme Court. It was opposed to the best interests of the people that this at-tempt should succeed, and the Executive still had confidence that the people would cern that truth for then The President presently referred to the alleged abuse which had been committed of the appointing power. He said that there was great misconception abroad, a to the good which the Executive might de for itself, or the harm which it might de others, by the bestowal of offices. Suppose, for instance, that there was a pos to be given away. There were sure to be twenty applicants for it, and when it was bestowed all that the President had done was to make one lukewarm friend and eteen enemies. The friend was si-ced, for after he received the appointment he had to make favor with the Senate in order to get it confirmed. The man was as likely as not to throw over the President altogether. It was different when the Executive was in harmony with the Senate; then the candidate knew that he could secure a majority of that body, and he could venture to give his adhe to the President. In point of fact, the Executive had not made more changes than were required by the public service not so many as were ordinarily made. There was a great outery, because the men who were actually in power had filled all the offices with their friends and suporters, and they did not want to se

With regard to the threatened impeachment, the Presdient said with a smile

Frequently during the conversation the President reiterated his belief that the people would eventually begin to look at all the questions now before them from the constitutional side. He seemed to be his public policy to the Constitution, which his oath obliged him to defend. That oath might as well be rescinded if Congress and the country refuse to recog-Constitution as a law binding

The country ought not to be in any loubt as to the objects which the Radicals have in view in impeaching the President, t cannot be alleged as a pretext that Mr. Johnson prevents necessary legislation. The majority of two-thirds is secured, and the veto can always be rendered inoperative. What is it, then, that the leaders of the party are seeking? To place one of their own number is the Providential. of their own number in the Presidential chair, so that the laws which they pass may be carried out at the point of the bayonet, if necessary. This would inevi-ably force a revolution almost directly. The safeguard against it now is that the classes legislated against believe that the President can exercise some restraint upon their antagonists. They do not yet feel that they are delivered over altogeth-er into their hands. This advantage to the country more than compensates for fir. Johnson's mistakes, whatever they say have been. The radicals wish to revulutionize the Government, and to put a bool of their own into the White House. They cannot pack the Suprem ng Executive could be induced to place more Judges on the bench, so that law might be interpreted according to radical principles. Resolved. That a committee of —— be appointed to confer with any committee that may be appointed by the city of Lexington, Covington, or Cincinnati, or by any of the counties or railroad companies north or south of the Kentucky river, in regard to the construction of railroad from Lexington through Richmond to intersect the road from Louisville to Cumberland Gap at a suitable point on said road. That said committee ascer Monday in March next, at the Court house, what assistance from any and all sources may be relied on to aid in the construction of the road aforesaid from Lexington through Richmond to intersect the Louisville and Cumberland Gap rail-

Both the substitute and resolutions were discussed at length. Hon Daniel Breck, Colonel David Irvine, Major S. Turner, and General John B. Houston made speeches in favor of Mr. Breck's substitute and against the resolutions of the committee, and Thos. S. Bronston, Wm. Chenault, J. B. McCreary, and H. T. Harris made speeches in favor of the resolutions reported by the committee. Curtis F. Burnam also offered a substitute for the committee resolutions, and urged its adoption in an earnest and ardent speech. unt his substitute was not adopted.

The question then coming up on the esolutions of the committee and Breck's substitute, the substitute was rejected and the entire resolutions, as reported by the committee, were adopted. On motion, the meeting then adjourned. R. G. MARTIN, President. J. B. McCREARY, Secretary. The committee appointed to visit Lor wille will be in the city on the 25th inst.

and, we hope, will be taken good care of by our City Fathers and the Board of Trade. We hope to have an extended notice of this scheme in a few days, when the subject will be placed before our citizens in its proper light.

Be it enacted by the Senate and Hous of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That for the purpose of redeeming and retiring any compound interest notes outstanding, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to issue temporary oan certificates in the manner prescribed v section 4 of the act entitled an act to authorize the issue of United States notes, and the redemption or funding thereof, and for funding the floating debt of the United States, approved Feb. 25, 1862, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 3 per centum per annum; principal and interest payable in lewful money on demand and payable in lawful money on demand, and payable in lawfal money on demand, and said certificates of temporary loan may constitute and be held by any National Bank holding or owning the same as part of the reserve provided for in sections 31 and 32 of the act entitled "An act to provide a national currency secared by a pledge of United States bonds, and to provide for the circulation and redemp-tion thereof, approved June 3, 1864, pro-vided that not less than two-fifths of the entire reserve of such banks shall consist of lawful money of the United States, and provided further that the amount of such temporary certificates at any time outstanding shall not exceed $100,000,000.

known by almost every railroad engineer, at least by reputation. A better engineer, one who could make better time, draw heavier loads, or keep his engine in better repair, I never knew. But Wash had one failing, he would drink; and if he was particularly elated with any good fortune or was expecting to make a fast run, he was sure to get full of whiskey; and though in that state never known to transgress the rules of the road by running on another train's time, or any thing of that sort, still he showed the thing which controlled him by running at a terrible rate of speed. At one time they purchased a of speed. At one time they purchased a couple of engines for the E. road, on which Wash. was running. These engines were very large, and were intended to be very fast, being put up on seven-foot wheels. From the circumstance of their bein planked between the spokes of their "dri phanked between the spokes of their drivers," that is, having a piece of plank set in between the spokes, the "boys" used to call them the "plank-roadors." They were tried, and though generally considered capable of making "fast time" under favorable circumstances, they didn't suit that read; so they were condemned to that road; so they were condemned to "the gravel-pit," until they could receive an overhauling, and be "cut down" a foot or two. Wash, had always consider that these engines were much abused, and had never received fair treatment; so he obtained permission of the Superintendent to take one of them into the shop and rea thorough overhauling, fixing her valves for the express purpose of running fast, and making many alterations in minor portions of her machinery. At last had the job completed, and took her out on the road. After running one or two trips on freight trains to smooth her brasses, and try her working, he was "chalked" for the fastest train on the road, the B. Express. All the "boys" on the road were anxious, for the result for it was were anxious for the result, for it was expected that "Old Wash." and the "plank-roader" would "astenish the natives" that trip. Wash, imbibed rather freely, and was somewhat under the influence of liquor when the leaving time his train came, though not enough to noticed: but as minute after minute passed and the train with which it conne not make its appearance, Wash., drinking all the time, grew tighter and tighter, till at last, when it did come in an hour and a half "behind time." Wash, was pretty comfortably drunk; so much that some of the men who had to go on he train with him looked rather "skeery," or they knew that they might expect to e "towed" as fast as the engine could How fast that was no one knew, but her seven-foot wheels promised a near approach to flying.

At last they started, and I freely confess that I never took as fast a ride in my life. (Wash. had got me to fire for him.) Keeping time was out of the question as than ten miles, before the brakemen, order-ed by the conductor, put on the brakes, impeding our speed somewhat, but not stopping us, for we were on a heavy down grade, and Wash. had her "wide open," and working steam at full stroke. At ast the conductor came over and begged Wash not to run so fast, for the passengers were half scared out of their senses. Wash simply pointed to the direction to use all "due exertion" to make up time, and never shut off a bit. So on we flew and the first stopping place for the train. Here the conductor came to Wash. again and told him if he did not run slower the passengers were going to leave. Wash said, "Let them leave," and gave no promises. Some of them did leave, so also did one of the brakemen and the baggageman, but away we went without them to O., where a message from head-quart to O., where a message from head-quarters was awaiting us, telling them to take Wash. from the engine and put another man on in his place. I told him of the message, and picking up his coat, he got off and staggered to a bench on the stoop of the depot, where he laid down seemingly to sleep. I started back to the engine, but Wesh celled after me and asked me but Wash. called after me, and asked me "how we got the orders to take him off?" I told him "by telegraph." "Humph,' said he, rolling over, "wish I d known that, the confounded dispatch never should have reased me." passed me!"
Wash. of course was not reinstated, but the "plankroader" never made the running time of any of the fast trains with any oth-er man on the "foot-board."

A Historical Reminiscence of the Old Dominion-The Ancestral Mansion of Winfield Scott-Scenes of his Boyhood-Burial Place of the Scott Family - Beautiful Appearance of the Place-Imposing Scenes-Battle of Five Forks.

RICHMOND, VA., February 1, 1867. During the pending dearth of news of a political character, and feeling called up-on to maintain the requisite equilibrium of a correspondent, it occurs to me that some of the elite of the Old Dominion, of a na-tional character, may be interesting to your readers. I propose giving a brief description of the time-honored family seats of one of those noble Virginians who graced the nation when the name of lirginia was the synonym of loyalty to the Union, and of unquestionable national love, and who also stood by that Union when his State had hoisted the banner of To the ancestral summer

The mansion was built originally about one hundred and twenty years since in some antiquated style of English architecture, which has almost entirely disappeared, being nearly remodelled by modpeared, being nearly remodened by mou-ern additions. The Pegram family, whose names are familiar in the late war, were intimately connected by marriage and in-termarriage with the Scotts, and it is supposed the mansion was originally built by them, and afterwards inherited by the Scotts through the marriage of some members of the family, being used conjointly as convenient by both families as a sum-mer residence. About 1838 the whole Scott property was purchased by a Mr. J.
Hill Smith, of Richmond, but the portion to which I now allude as being the residence of the General is still in possession

This farm adjoins and is now in full view of Dinwiddie Courthouse—hence its name, "Village View"—and presents a most charming appearance. The mansion would require a two cent stamp upon it if most charming appearance. The mansion is a commodious antique building, with a verandah in front the length of the whole louse, surrounded by every description of farm building, ornamented by groves, springs, and orchards. A cultivated garden and grapery, situated upon one of the highest points in the country, environed by as many hills as the famous city on the Tiber, the whole from the leading country road which passes in front making a most delightful and pleasing impression. Immediately in the rear of the residence, but in full view of the road, is the family burying ground of the Scotts, in an excellent state of preservation and securely walled in with granite in the manner of old English tombs. In this

I have often wondered that some of the old General's Northern friends and admirers do not appropriate (as his State would have done had he gone with it when the flag of secession was unfurled to the breeze) this sacred spot as a pleasant re-treat, by depleting some of their coffers in beautifying and adorning this attractive and now national place. This would meet with the sympathies and best wishes of the whole North, and would once more make it an oasis in the destruction created in this region by the late horrid war.
The battle of Five Forks, the last decis-

My imagination dwells with pleasure on this venerated place.

THE LAKE TUNNEL-THE LAST EXCUR-SION THROUGH IT.—The very last excur-sion of the season, or of any season, through the great lake tunnel, was made on Saturday by a party of gentlemen who, in common with many citizens, had a laudable desire to explore the bore once more before the roar and rush of waters from the crib to shore should close the door to human foot. The tracks are to be taken up in the early part of this week, so there can be no more underground excursions to the crib. Those who have not seen that circular wall of brick must hence-forth be content to believe it there. Those who have seen it will never see it again. The two fleet steeds—we mean the faithful mules—who have for some two years been moving to and fro in the depths like a pair of shuttles, helping to put together that wonderful hose pipe, will mix again in the upper strata of society; their occu-pation down below is gone. They have in the upper strata of society, their occur-pation down below is gone. They have finally rested from their labor, and the waters follow them.

It was appropriate that the last visit to the tunnel should be made by a party of gentlemen, the representatives of a class the most fitted to rightly appreciate the against deep the undertaking—mechanmagnitude of the undertaking-mechan ics, architects, builders, and contractors. It was Alderman Carter's doing. He was desirous that these men should descend in a body to enjoy a sight of this triumph of engineering skill, and with this view he invited a select company to pay the last

It would have been a cold day indeed for a journey over land, or a voyage over sea, but it was tolerably pleasant under both sea and land, and agreeably suggested an approach to the central fires. The company assembled at the mouth of the shore shaft, where they awaited with eagerness the word "go" from Alderman Carter who had undertaken to marshal the host through the dark tube. To most o through the dark tube. To most of the party it was quite a new sensation, and various were the surmises as to how they would go in and how come out again, whether it might be February weather or if they might not expect a Fourth of July in the realms below. They soon disappeared from the upper air by half dozens, and gested themselves as comfortably as eirfrom the upper air by hair dozens, and seated themselves as comfortably as 'eircumstances would permit in the little boxes drawn by the patient mules.

The process of going through the bore is a very simple one, and would not be at all exhilarating were it not that your imagination is potently excited, and you are thing to imagine that the wild team is at liberty to imagine that the wine team is plunging with you down to the dwelling place of everlasting night. But if the fancy has free play, so has the poor tenement of clay, for you are forced into a most uneasy position with your knees drawn up to your chin, and the only thing a plain wattered for man are and to its tree. a plain matter-of-fact man can do is to try and estimate the rate of progress by watching the white marks on the side, or from the shore to the crib, and there an party, including the opening and empty-ng of sundry bottles of champagne. While hese were being discussed, Ald. Carter these were being discussed, Ald. Carter took occasion to comment in commendatory terms on the magnitude of the idea which had thus been so successfully realized, and paid a handsome compliment to Mr. Dull, who was present. The health of Dull & Gowan was drank, the health of the passing a pleasant quarter of an hour, admiring the wonders of the crib, and looking out upon the lake, which presented a out upon the lake, which presented a boundless expanse of small, round pieces of floating ice, very like buckwheat cakes, but not quite so hot, they once more disap-peared down the shaft, and took seats in he underground railway. The way home was enlivened with choruses of "Johnie comes marching Home," and "John Brown, which made the brick walls reecho with a sound which may not be heard ithin them again. Every one was delighted with the visit.

In the afternoon another party went out to the crib, accompanied by Mr. Ches-brough, and this was the last journey.

Hog Killing-How it is Done in an Abattoir.

Those who have only seen hogs killed upon the farm have little idea how the thing is done in slaughter-houses. If they have been through the large slaughtering establishments at Cincinnation Chicago, establishments at Cincinnati or Chicago, they have got a good insight into the business; but to see the whole in perfection, with all the modern improvements, let a person go to Communipaw, New Jersey, opposite the southern point of the city, and witness the transformation of live hogs into pork as if by magic, at that place. We will not assert, with some, that it is done so scientifically that "the operation is rather agreeable than otherwise," and each animal, whether hog, bullock, or sheep, "awaits with impationed his turn to sheep, 'awaits with impatience his turn to be taken off,' but, if the extent of squeal expresses the amount of suffering, it is here of short duration, for long before the farmer's hog has uttered those short guttural notes indicating that he was on the point of caving in having led his assailpoint of caving in, having led his assailpoint of caving in, naving led his assairants in several furious charges about the yard, our hog would have been treated to a warm bath, and scraped down in the most approved style by his humane and scientific manipulators. Not only is the killing done up in the most expeditious manner, but it is claimed that the greatest concern is used, that from a minimum of the property is used, that from a minimum of the property is used, that from a minimum of the property is used, that from a minimum of the property is used, that from a minimum of the property is used, that from a minimum of the property is used, that from a minimum of the property is used, that from a minimum of the property is used, that the property is used. est economy is used—that from a pig's mouth to the end of his tail all is saved

The building in which the killing is done The building in which the killing is done is 380x100 feet, with three projections or wings, each 100x60 feet, and in these wings the hogs are yarded and butchered, and the final operations of dressing are performed just as they reach the main room. Most of the space is used for hanging up the hogs after killing, the slides holding 7,000 of them; and by the time they are all full the first are ready to be stacked up, or passed through the chute stacked up, or passed through the chute into the wagons below. A separate build-ing contains the thousands of hogs to be drawn from as wanted. They are driven in squads of about 200 up some back steps into a pen. From this they are hoisted up by a hind leg, the striking bemanner of old English tombs. In this are deposited the remains of a number of ancestors of the General and his relatives; but the names of whom I could not ascertain.

The beautiful farm, in common with all others, shows the desolating ravages of war to a great extent; the soil is of the most fertile nature, and is admirably suited to the cultivation of cotton, tobacco, grapes, and all the cereals. Granite of the best of the most of the cultivation of cotton, tobacco, grapes, and all the cereals. Granite of the best of the cultivation of cotton, tobacco, grapes, and all the cereals. We will now go minutely through the operation of killing, as the Dutchman did when asked who killed in that establishment. Il kill. chine expeditiously, and only those skilled can turn out two well dressed hogs per minute from each of the six stands or benches, as we have repeatedly seen them do. This, in fact, is the average, and, with gangs at each of the benches, 720 hogs can be run off per hour. They are not all in fise at present.

be run off per hour. They are not all in use at present.

It takes 30 men and boys to make up a full or working gang at each bench or form employed as follows: Two men or boys to keep the pens supplied with hogs; three to slip a rope around a hind leg and hoist them up by means of a pulley-wheel; one to stick them; two to work them over with sticks and hooks in the water; two to tip them out when scalded; ten to pull, haul and scrape; five upon each side of the bench, armed with finger-scrapers—somewhat like the bottom of an old-fashioned round iron candlestick—knives, and the end of a cold water pipe to wash them off with. The hog is set upon a moment by with. The hog is set upon a moment by the first pair, then rolled over to the sec-ond, and so passed down the inclined form, and by the time he reaches the lower end is ready for the gambrel by which he is strung up. One man inserts the gambrel, and attaches him to a clamp or hook upon and attaches him to a clamp or hook upon the track, where he is seized by the man with a long knife, one stroke of which downward, and another upward, makes the opening for the removal of the offal. Two or three more slight cuts inside, and the "inwards" are thrown upon a bench for the four cleaners and riddlers to take charge of, the liver and heartgoing in another direction. One man now plays the hose upon the careass to wash off the blood, another gives the finishing scrape with a knife, while two men are kept at with a knife, while two men are kept at work transferring them from the suspend-ed track to the slides or frames, and push-ing them back in their places, all facing way at once, between those suspended for sticking and the washed off animal. The whole thing moves like clock-work, and no idlers are tolerated, as they would cause a jar or hitch in the work. Everything is carried on with so much neatness, and there is such a finishing look to the car-casses, when dressed, that the most fastidious pork-eaters could interpose no objec-tions on the point of cleanliness. Besides, the operations are all open to inspection and criticism.

The caul and cleaner portions of the fat are fried out separately in the large steam tanks for what is called No. 1 lard, while tanks for what is called No. I hard, while the other is kept by itself and graded according to quality, the poorest being sold for a cheap grease. Here is a waste of what should go toward feeding the poor in some shape, a hore liver. ing the poor in some shape, a hog's liver really being little inferior to that of a bul-lock; indeed, many farmers throw away the latter and retain the former. The small intestines are saved for sausage cas-ings, while the blood goes to waste, falling into the water below, and is carried off by the tide. This will in time be saved for its chemical and fertilizing properties; in fact arrangements are now making to secure it. At present the work is all done by hand labor, but machinery is being erected, so that the heaviest portions, viz., hoisting the hogs for sticking and tipping them out of the scalding tank, can be done by steam power. This will save the labor of three or

A MURDERER. One of John Morgan's Telegraphers Wears the Rope-

Particulars of the Affair. By a private dispatch from Lexington the Cincinnati Commercial, we learn that Geo. A. Ellsworth, formerly John Morgan's telegraph operator, who shot and killed James Smothers, at Sharpsourg, Bath county, Kentucky, on Satur day last, was arrested eight miles from Lexington, on the Harrodsburg pike, yeserday. The particulars of the murder

Ellsworth and a young man named Mox ey Boyd, went to Sharpsburg on a spree, and finding no drinking saloons there called on Smothers and asked him to sell them a bottle of whisky. Smother brought the whisky out, and Ellsworth, taking hold of the bottle, inquired the price of it Smothers replied one dollar. Ellsworth said it was too much, and that he would not pay it. Smothers then refused to let hem have the whisky, whereupon Ellsworth drew a pistol and shot him through the back. The parties retreated from the town, followed by a number of citizens, ome of whom fired at them.

Ellsworth was employed as an operator in the Western Union Telegraph Office in Cincinnati, last summer, and was one of John Morgan's telegraphers. A reward of $1,000 was offered for his arrest.

OUR FRANKFORT LETTER.

FRANKFORT, February 20, 1867. GETTING READY FOR THE CONVENTION. The arrivals last night and this morn ing were numerous, and to-night and to-morrow will witness the reception of a crowd, greater, perhaps, than ever met in convention in Kentucky. Already the hotels are full. What the throng will do r lodging, unless they camp down on the ridge, is as yet a mystery to me. The dicals have high hopes of a division, radicals have high hopes of a division, that, like the monkey, they may eat the cheese of the two disputant cats. They held a caucus a day or two since and de termined to keen on their mask whiel ermined to keep on their mask which they call principle, but which might be properly denominated "skullduggery".

Among the more prominent arrivals at the Capitol Hotel, I observe those of Major Jack Thompson, of Owensbero; J. R. Hallam, of Newport; C. E. Preston is expected to arrive this evening.

By-the-way, it is very likely that the 22d

Convention will hold over two days to nermanent organization and nge all the minutiæ of a party and a plan of campaign. THE TWENTY-SECOND BALL.

I doubt if there will happen again in a decade so brilliant a ball as that to come off on the 22d. Quite a number of apart-ments have been engaged for a numerous party from Louisville, comprising among hers a very brilliant delegation now vis-ing your city from Indiana. The gentlemen of the Assembly Club assure me that every arrangement will be made to afford n evening of unalloyed pleasure, and one they trust that will long be remembered by the participants. THE HOP LAST NIGHT.

BUSINESS IN THE HOUSE Was in the main exceedingly dull, having ely reports from committees. Il reapportioning representation in the state, being so manifestly imperfect, was aid on the table. FROM ST. LOUIS.

Sr. Louis, Feb. 20. A dispatch from Jefferson City states that Mr. Jewett, from the Judiciary Committee, to whom was referred the resolution ordering an inquiry as to certain opinions alleged to have been expresse by Judge Moody, of the St. Louis Circui and his acts in impanelling jurors withou requiring them to take the oath of loyalty reported, under a suspension of the rules that the committee was of the opinion that the case calls for the action of the General Assembly in the form of an address to remove the said Judge from office, and recommend a joint resolution that there is proper cause for removal by ad-dress of Judge Moody on the ground that he has violated the State Constitution h his official acts, and that he is an unsafe, unsuitable, and improper person to hold the office of Judge of the Circuit Court in

The resolution was read a third time Under a further suspension of the rules Mr. Waters, from the special committee appointed to inquire into the official conduct of Judge King, of the Fifth Judicia Circuit, reported that, after a careful consideration of the case, they were of the opinion that he has been guilty of high misdemeanors in office and gross corrupon, and recommend the adoption of resolution by the House impeaching said Judge for misdemeanors in office—among others, of instructing a grand jury to find no bills of indictment against Confederate soldiers, of regular or irregular up.
Mr. Doolittle offered an amendment to

Mr. Gladstone in Paris — His Speech at the Dinner of the Political Economy Society.

Paris (Jan. 28) Cor. of the London Times. I mentioned in my letter of Friday that the Political Economy Society had, on the proposition of M. Wolowski, resolved to entertain Mr. Gladstone at dinner during his stay in this city. The invitation was sent to him while he was still in Florence, and accepted. On his arrival here urday was fixed on, as Mr. Gladstone at first arranged to leave for London on Sunday evening, though, I believe, he wil prolong his stay till Tuesday. The regu lar meeting of the Society takes place or the 5th of every month, unless the 5th falls on a Sunday, when it is postponed to the following day. On the present oc easion the notice was short. It was sen o the members on the evening of Friday and the forenoon of Saturday, but the atendance was numerous. Several men pers were absent in the country, but they who had previous engagements dispense with them in order not to lose the tunity of seeing and hearing for the first time the great financier and the great or ator of the age. Since the Society has transferred its meetings from the Palais Royal to the more spacious saloons of the Grand Hotel, the average attendance is about forty; on Saturday evening it was over one hundred, including ten or a doz-en guests who had been specially invited by the Committee to meet Mr. Gladstone Long before the hour fixed for the din ner yesterday the saloon of the Grand H tel was filled. At 7:30 Mr. Gladstone with Mr. Cardwell and the nephew of th

Wolowski, who pre-sented to the distinguished guests several f the prominent members of the Society The dinner took place in the great dining room on the ground floor, and one hundre and twelve persons sat down to the table France, Minister of Figance under th Orleans Government, and Minister of th orieans Government, and Minister of the same Department in the first Cabinet of the President of the Republic—from the 20th of December, 1848, till the end of October, 1849—and now the President of the Society of Political Economy, presided. Mr. Gladstone sat on his right hand, and Mr. Cardwell on his left. Next to Mr. Gladstone was M. Forcade de la Roquette, the new Minister of Commerce and Public Works; and next to him M. Wolowski, Member of the Institute, Professor at the Conservatoire des Arts et Metiers. By the side of Mr. Cardwell was M. Renouard, a Judge in the High Court of Cassation, former Peer of France, and one of the oldest members, of the and one of the oldest members Society of Political Economy. When din-ner was over M. Passy rose and proposed the health of their distinguished guests in a brief speech, in which he spoke of the honor done them all by the presence among them of a man of transcendant genius, who had done such signal service to his own country and to mankind. Last night Mr. Gladstone spoke for about three-quarters of an hour, and I fancy that many present, who either did not understand, or only very imperfectly, our language, went away with the same conviction. He spoke in English to a French audience; and though to several French audience; and though to several among them it was, as it were, an unknown tongue, some how or other all seemed to understand what he said without the help of an interpreter. He began by thanking the Society for the honor they paid him by their invitation, and especially by the manner in which they echoed the remarks of their President. He modestly alluded to what he had done during his tenure of office as Chancellor of the Exchequer. MARISTTA, O., Feb. 20-2 P. M.

There were two persons to whom the real merit was due—first, the Emperor Napoleon, but for whose strong will and perseverance that great act never would have been accomplished for it was would have been accomplished, for it was he who, in spite of obstacles which would have deterred any one else, transformed When the steamer Lady Gay, which left this port at midnight on Sunday, arrived opposite Carondelet, about one o'clock, the starboard cylinder burst. The Feport was loud and alarming, and an immense amount of steam escaped into and through the steamer, resulting in fear and consternation. As soon as possible, Mr. Wm. Hendrick, chief engineer, scrambled over the freight, and, gaining the vicinity of the engine, found the second engineer, Fred. Furch, lying dead. It is supposed that he was in the act of steeppine from what had once been but a pleasing dream into a brilliant and solid reality; and, next, to Mr. Cobden, a man of the high-est order of talent, of the purest patriotism, of the most indomitable perse-verance in what he felt to be right and just, and of the most disinterested character. To these two personages all the merit of that great work should be attrib-uted, while all the merit he claimed for himself was having seconded the efforts of his lamented friend. His allusion to of iron, struck his chest or head and threw him a distance of about twenty feet. His remains presented a shocking aspect. A part of the theory as to the accident is, that a portion of the packing ring and follower were first broken off and struck the bottom of the cylinder near its forum end, breaking a piece about thirty feet each way out of the bottom, and then the cylinder head was forced out. A portion of the cylinder head was Mr. Cobden was most touching; it was re-ceived with a burst of applause. Mr. Gladstone fully admitted that England had long sinned in the matter of commercial freecom, but she had since made amends; her repentance for her errors was before the world, and she had done much in the way of satisfaction. There was still, in-deed, something to do, and that something he hoped would be realized. Other naleft Furch at the engine, two minutes before accident. The path of commercial freedom was like the path of virtue; it was only the first steps that were difficult—the last were the most easy. He had heard people say that France had greatly profited by the treaty of commerce with England; he sincerely hoped the statement was true, and he assured his hearers that he not only rejoiced at it, but he offered them his most sincere congrat-ulations. Englishmen were not jealous plosion. Fireth was raised to property.
